

Pesticides ban - home and garden

Pesticides ban - advice to gardeners

Since 31 March 2004 it has been illegal to use or store certain pesticides. The ban was brought in by the EU to make sure that the pesticides available, continue to meet modern safety standards.

The chemicals that are banned are ammonium sulphamate, atrazine, dichlorophen, dichlorprop, dikegulac, lindane, malathion, parquat, permethrin, resmethrin, simazine, tar acids, tar oils, triforine and 2,3,6-TBA.

Their names should appear on all packaging of products they are in.

The products on sale in the shops should no longer contain these ingredients. However, products which used to contain these ingredients may still have the same name, and this might cause some confusion. Our advice is to check the product registration or 'M' number. For example:

'ASDA Lawn Feed Weed and Mosskiller' containing dichlorprop (M10871) has been withdrawn, but has been replaced by 'ASDA Lawn Feed Weed and Mosskiller' containing dichlorprop-p (M10968).

The name remains the same but the active ingredient and the registration number are different.

To properly identify products that have been withdrawn you should check the registration number rather than rely on the product name.

If you find a banned product you need to get rid of it properly.

- Don't:
- flush it down the toilet
 - throw it in the bin; or
 - throw it down the drain.
- Do:
- wear gloves and any other recommended safety gear when handling pesticide containers; and
 - follow the manufacturers instructions if you spill any of the products.

The list of products in this leaflet is always being updated. For a current full list of products that are banned, and more information about pesticides, phone 01904 455775 or visit the HSE Safety Directorate's website at www.hse.gov.uk/pesticides and click on 'home and garden'.
